the so-called Briežu lauze. This area is good to go for wild mushrooms and berries.

10 | Roči Forest Reserve
An area south of the road Līgatne–Cēsis between Skaļupes and the River Amata, which is established to protect Roči Forest Reserve (a territory significant in terms of biodiversity). Visitors are prohibited. Respect it! Roči Reserve is home to several wild boar families, whom you might spot on the nearby fields. Meadows in the vicinity of Amata are a favourite place for roe deer.

11 | Kūķu Cliffs 57.27465, 25.1064
Accessible and visible from the road Līgatne–Kārļi, where a small forest road (see the sign) leads towards the River Gauja. Kūķu Cliffs are deemed the most massive sandstone outcrop in Latvia from the Devonian Period. Length ~500 m, height – 43 m. The massive cliffs are still shaped under the influence of the current, springs, and ice coming with the flood waters. During cold winters, beautiful frozen waterfalls are formed on the cliffs. Where the waters of the River Gauja have washed boulders carried by glacier, Kūķu Rapids (among the most impressive rapids in Latvia) are seen.

12 | Primeval valley of the River Amata
One of the deepest river valleys in Latvia which has been established along with the primeval valley of the River Gauja at the end of the glacial period and post-glacial rebound, when the glacier waters went in Gauja direction. Beautiful and scenic sandstone outcrops. Among these – Zvārte Rock, which is among the most popular outcrops in Latvia.
Pay attention! Near the private house “Krustkalni”, there is a linden which every summer is home to giant hornets. Be careful!

13 | Rakšu Cliffs 57.27412, 25.19968
Located on the left bank of the valley of the River Rakšupe, not far from the old bridge. Powerful spring comes out of the earth at the feet of the cliffs. The cliff wall is overgrown with velvet lichen, creating an impression as if the outcrop was covered with soot. Pay attention! Traces of a massive landslide (due to erosion and other natural processes) are seen. In the forest not far from Rakšu Cliffs, medieval cross stones are found. These are not only historical, but also natural objects – micro habitats – biotope for various species of moss and lichen.
